THE ST CATHERINE'S MARRIAGE INDEX FOR MARCH QUARTER 1849

The information listed below derives from the GENUKI web page
<http://www.cs.ncl.ac.uk/genuki/StCathsTranscriptions/#Selective>

Introduction

The records of civil registration of post-1837 births, marriages and deaths in England and Wales that are held by the General Register Office (St Catherine's House) are not available to the public, though individual certificates can be purchased. What is available, including on microfiche or microfilm at many libraries, is a set of indexes to these records. The marriage indexes have separate entries for husbands and wives, and so it can be very difficult to identify the entries for a given marriage, and essentially impossible if only one spouse's name is known, from the indexes alone. Thus one is left with the considerable expense of having to commission the GRO to perform searches, or to purchase certificates that might well turn out to be irrelevant.

Mike Foster, of New Zealand, has been exploring improved ways of exploiting the information that is provided by the marriage indexes, by producing reorganized transcriptions of the some of the indexes. The result is what are in effect almost reconstitutions of the original records, which bring together the names of each of the spouses of each of the up to four marriages that were recorded on a single page. The resulting files, which with Mike Foster's permission are made available here, can be searched using your browser's "Find" command, in order to attempt to find a particular named individual, and a small group of possible marriage partners of this individual.

The files, like the original GRO record volumes, but unlike the indexes, each cover a separate area of England and Wales. Though already very extensive, especially for what is to date almost entirely the work of one transcriber, Mike Foster himself, they of course cover only a small fraction of the entire GRO indexes. However they have enabled much to be learned about the organization and accuracy of the GRO records and their indexes, as well as showing how tremendously valuable such a complete set of reorganized transcriptions would be to family historians and others.

Note: The files are also being made available (in zipped form) for download from the GENUKI-L archive.

This file is one of 27 files covering the 27 volumes of the St Catherine's Marriage Index for the March quarter of 1849.

Errors in the St Cath's index are generally shown by giving the St Cath's data in square brackets. For example this may indicate that St Cath's gives a wrong volume no. or district name.

Where I am uncertain about a page number, I repeat the page no. with a question mark. Where I am uncertain of one digit in a page no. I query that digit.

All names are sorted into page sequence. Some pages are found to have an uneven no. of entries. This may reflect unclear fiche, or a page-no. error in the index, or may in many cases indicate an alias or variant spellings in the original record, or simply a double entry of the same name. Or it may be an indexing/copying error at St Cath's. Or it may be my error. If a user of these files is able to correct an error, please let me know. In some cases I have been able to clarify the page no. because of the number of names in the different pages.

In many cases I have abbreviated district names but I hope they are sufficiently obvious. Personal names are given in full, but where St Cath's shows an abbreviation (eg Elizth or Thos) I have shown it highlighted.

Marriage partners identified through the UK Marriage Witness system are indicated.

St Catherine's marriages 1856/Q1

Introduction

The records of civil registration of post-1837 births, marriages and deaths in England and Wales that are held by the General Register Office (St Catherine's House) are not available to the public, though individual certificates can be purchased. What is available, including on microfiche or microfilm at many libraries, is a set of indexes to these records. The marriage indexes have separate entries for husbands and wives, and so it can be very difficult to identify the entries for a given marriage, and essentially impossible if only one spouse's name is known, from the indexes alone. Thus one is left with the considerable expense of having to commission the GRO to perform searches, or to purchase certificates that might well turn out to be irrelevant.

Mike Foster, of New Zealand, has been exploring improved ways of exploiting the information that is provided by the marriage indexes, by producing reorganized transcriptions of the some of the indexes.

The result is what are in effect almost reconstitutions of the original records, which bring together the names of each of the spouses of each of the up to four marriages that were recorded on a single page. The resulting files, which with Mike Foster's permission are made available here, can be searched using your browser's "Find" command, in order to attempt to find a particular named individual, and a small group of possible marriage partners of this individual.

The files, like the original GRO record volumes, but unlike the indexes, each cover a separate area of England and Wales. Though already very extensive, especially for what is to date almost entirely the work of one transcriber, Mike Foster himself, they of course cover only a small fraction of the entire GRO indexes. However they have enabled much to be learned about the organization and accuracy of the GRO records and their indexes, as well as showing how tremendously valuable such a complete set of reorganized transcriptions would be to family historians and others.

Note: The files are also being made available (in zipped form) for download from the GENUKI-L archive.

After the abdication of James II. in the year 1688, a rumour was spread in the north of England, that the abdicated monarch was laying off the Yorkshire coast, ready to make a descent with a numerous army from France, in hopes of regaining his lost throne. This report gave the Lord Lieutenant of Westmorland an opportunity of showing his own and the people's attachment to the new order of things. He accordingly called out the Posse Comitatus comprising all able-bodied men from sixteen to sixty. The order was obeyed with alacrity; and the inhabitants met armed in a field called Miller's Close, near Kendal, from whence they marched to Kirkby Lonsdale. This historical fact explains the following popular rhyme, the meaning of which is, at this day, not generally understood: "Eighty-eight was Kerby feight, When nivver a man was slain; They yatt their meatt, an' drank their drink, And sae kom merrily haem again." 1688-1689 William Wilson.
